

The Pulling Together the Past project run by the Cornish Pilot Gig Association is a project that has run over the last couple of years, which depicts the history of Cornish Pilot Gig Rowing.

At the recent CPGA AGM all clubs were given a heritage board that gives an insight into the history of gig rowing. These boards were commissioned as part of the above project. These boards are durable and made to be outdoors in all weathers.

Each Club has been asked to display their heritage board where the general public can see them in their local area. Of particular interest for us is that Ann Glanville features on this board and so is very relevant to Caradon gig club and Saltash.

On that basis we are seeking the council's permission as to where we can display this board. Good spots may include either outside Ashtorre near the one about the Ferry, or perhaps near to Ann Glanville's bench.

Your thoughts and permissions on this would be gratefully received.

We look forward to hearing from you.

Kind regards
